RE: Poll Finds Overwhelming Support for Public Disclosure of Political Contributions to Organizations

A nationwide survey of likely 2020 general election voters commissioned by the Campaign Legal Center – and conducted by both a Democratic and a Republican polling firm – finds overwhelming support for public disclosing political contributions to organizations. Support for disclosure remains strong regardless of which organization the contribution is for.¹

More than four-out-of-five voters (83%) support public disclosing contributions to organizations involved in elections, with a majority of 56% strongly in support. This intense support for public disclosure extends across partisan and demographic lines.

¹ ALG Research, with consultation from GS Strategy Group, conducted n=800 online interviews with a representative, nationwide sample of likely 2020 presidential voters October 3-7, 2019. The sample consisted of n=700 voters nationwide, plus a n=100 oversample of Independents. The survey was conducted in both English and Spanish.

Support for disclosing political contributions to specific organizations is also high, regardless of where the organization falls on the ideological spectrum. Political partisans were just as likely to support disclosing contributions to organizations they were more likely to agree with as they were for organizations they were more likely to disagree with.
