Dear Chairman Barnes and Co-Chairman Vinovich:

Campaign Legal Center (“CLC”) respectfully requests that the Office of Congressional Ethics (“OCE”) investigate Rep. Lance Gooden for a possible violation of the STOCK Act and House rules. In 2020, Rep. Gooden appears to have purchased 12 assets with a total value ranging from approximately $60,019 and $376,000 without disclosing the transactions.<sup>1</sup> While Rep. Gooden disclosed the ownership of these assets on his annual financial disclosure, he did not file any corresponding periodic transaction reports (“PTRs”). A preliminary OCE investigation is required to determine whether the new stocks that appear on Rep. Gooden’s 2020 report are the result of transactions that require PTRs pursuant to the STOCK Act and House rules.

The STOCK Act does not excuse failing to file PTRs for reportable transactions, yet members of Congress are avoiding scrutiny into the nature of their stock trades by not timely disclosing the transactions throughout the year. Instead, they disclose the ownership of assets in their annual reports without disclosing the underlying transaction at the time the transaction occurred. This trend could quickly defeat one of the purposes of the STOCK

Act, which is real time disclosure of potential conflicts of interest. If members are not held accountable for failing to file PTRs, many will continue to wait until their annual financial disclosures to reveal stock trades and pay nominal late fees, thereby circumventing the STOCK Act.

When members of Congress trade individual stocks and fail to disclose those trades, they break the law and diminish the public's trust in government. The recent prevalence of STOCK Act violations in the House shows that merely the threat of a fine is not deterring members of Congress from breaking the law; real accountability is necessary. As members of Congress craft laws that directly impact the lives of all Americans, the public must be able to trust that representatives are acting in the public's interest, and not in their own financial interest.

The STOCK Act and House Rules Require Members of Congress to Timely Report All Individual Stock Transactions

The STOCK Act amended the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 (“EIGA”) to require members of Congress to report their individual stock transactions no “later than 30 days after receiving notification of any transaction required to be reported under section 102(a)(5)(B), but in no case later than 45 days after such transaction . . . .”<sup>2</sup>

House rules incorporate these reporting requirements. House Rule 26, clause 2 states, “[f]or the purposes of this rule, the provisions of title I of the Ethics in Government Act of 1978 shall be considered Rules of the House as they pertain to Members, Delegates, the Resident Commissioner, officers, and employees of the House.”<sup>3</sup>

The House Committee on Ethics trains and reminds members of Congress annually in writing of the consequences of failing to file PTRs. Specifically, the Committee on Ethics advises:

“[e]ach Member, officer, and senior staffer is responsible for the completeness and accuracy of the information contained in the individual’s PTR, even if someone else prepared, or assisted in preparing, all or part of it. The EIGA provides that the Attorney General may pursue either civil or criminal penalties against an individual who knowingly and willfully falsifies a statement or fails to file a statement required by the EIGA. The maximum civil penalty is $61,585. The maximum criminal penalty is up to one year in prison and a fine of up to $61,585.”<sup>4</sup>

In addition, the Committee on Ethics advises that 18 U.S.C. § 1001 is applicable to PTRs. “That criminal statute provides for a fine of up to $250,000 and/or imprisonment for up to five years for knowingly and willfully making any materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or representation, or falsifying, concealing, or covering up a material fact, in a filing under the EIGA.”<sup>5</sup>

Rep. Gooden’s 2020 Annual Disclosure Includes Twelve New Assets Without Corresponding PTRs

According to Rep. Gooden’s annual financial disclosures for 2019 and 2020, his asset holdings went through significant changes, yet no corresponding transactions were reported. Twelve assets appear on Rep. Gooden’s 2020 financial disclosure that do not appear on his 2019 disclosure.<sup>6</sup> Without additional information, it therefore appears that Rep. Gooden purchased those assets but failed to report the transactions as required. The assets in question have a total value ranging from approximately $60,019 and $376,000.

Under certain rare circumstances an asset purchased during the reporting period may appear on an annual financial disclosure report, but not require a PTR. Specifically, a PTR may not be required if the initial stock purchase was below the reporting threshold: transaction amounts that exceed $1,000. That asset may then appear on a subsequent annual report if the value appreciated above the reporting threshold during the reporting period. To know whether this exception applies, an OCE preliminary review is needed to determine the value of each of Rep. Gooden’s initial transactions.

Rep. Gooden May Have Violated the STOCK Act

The assets Rep. Gooden apparently failed to report transactions for are stock in American Airlines, APA Corporation, Royal Caribbean Cruises Ltd., Delta Air Lines, Inc., Hertz Global Holdings, Inc., Luckin Coffee Inc., Marathon Oil Corporation, Occidental Petroleum Corporation, Ovintiv Inc.,

Plains All American Pipeline, L.P., Sotherly Hotels Inc., and United Airlines Holdings, Inc.<sup>7</sup> The trades would have occurred while Rep. Gooden was a member of the House Committee on Financial Services.<sup>8</sup> Based on publicly available information, it is unclear whether Rep. Gooden's failure to file was an attempt to avoid scrutiny of trades connected with non-public information or with potential conflicts of interest.

If Rep. Gooden's new assets are the result of reportable transactions, accepting his failure to file PTRs as merely an oversight requires an assumption that he was not familiar with the requirement and had not received any training. Two factors suggest that Rep. Gooden was in fact aware of the requirement prior to the filing of his PTRs and may have knowingly avoided disclosing his stock trades at the time they were made.

First, Rep. Gooden was required to attend mandatory ethics training for new members of Congress in 2019, as well as subsequent annual ethics training.<sup>9</sup> This training includes discussion of financial disclosures and the STOCK Act. The Committee on Ethics does not grant extensions for completing ethics training.<sup>10</sup> Therefore, it seems likely that Rep. Gooden was aware of the requirement to report his transactions at the time they occurred.<sup>11</sup>

Second, even if Rep. Gooden asserts that he did not know of the PTR requirements at the time of any reportable trades, despite having undergone contemporaneous training that explained the requirements, he should have known about the disclosure requirements. High profile insider trading allegations engulfed several senators in March 2020 and became widely publicized.<sup>12</sup> These allegations of STOCK Act violations were all based on information disclosed in PTRs. Then, another scandal involving STOCK Act violations came to light: Rep. Donna Shalala failed to file PTRs for numerous transactions.<sup>13</sup> Considering that the requirement for PTRs in Congress was headline news throughout 2020, it seems unlikely that he was unaware of the disclosure requirements at the time of the transactions.

For these reasons, Rep. Gooden cannot excuse his failure to report with a claim that it he was unfamiliar with the financial disclosure requirements.

Conclusion

The STOCK Act requires members of Congress to file PTRs for any individual stock trades.<sup>14</sup> Based on the available facts, there is probable cause to believe that Rep. Gooden was aware of this requirement. Any failure to file transaction reports violates the STOCK Act.

CLC respectfully requests that OCE open a preliminary review to determine whether Rep. Gooden’s nondisclosure was an intentional violation of the STOCK Act and House rules.

We acknowledge that 18 U.S.C. § 1001 applies to the information provided.
