2 In MUR 6368, the Missouri Democratic Party alleged that Crossroads GPS became a political committee in 2010 when it aired the "Lawsuit" advertisement discussed in this report. Because the allegation in MUR 6368 regarding Crossroads GPS's political committee status overlaps with the allegations contained in MUR 6396, we recommended in MUR 6368 that the Commission sever that allegation and treat it as part of MUR 6396. We therefore treat the Missouri Democratic Party as a Complainant in this matter.

I. INTRODUCTION

In 2010, Crossroads Grassroots Policy Strategies ("Crossroads GPS") spent millions of dollars on federal campaign activity. This matter involves allegations that Crossroads GPS violated the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971, as amended, (the "Act") by failing to organize, register, and report as a political committee in 2010. See Compl. at 1-2.

Crossroads GPS acknowledges making and reporting approximately $15.4 million in independent expenditures during 2010. Resp. at 7. As a consequence, Crossroads GPS concedes that it exceeded the Act's $1,000 threshold for expenditures or contributions triggering political committee status. 2 U.S.C. § 431(4). Crossroads GPS argues, however, that it is not a political committee under the Act because it lacks the requisite major purpose: the nomination or election of a federal candidate. Resp. at 1. Crossroads GPS's argument rests on the assertion that, in 2010, it spent greater sums on activity not considered express advocacy than it did on independent expenditures. Id. In our view, the argument is wide of the mark.

As discussed below, the available information regarding Crossroads GPS's overall conduct in 2010 supports a finding that there is reason to believe that Crossroads GPS had as its major purpose the nomination or election of federal candidates. Accordingly, we recommend that the Commission find reason to believe that Crossroads GPS violated 2 U.S.C. §§ 432, 433, and 434 by failing to organize, register, and report as a political committee, and authorize an investigation.
II. FACTUAL AND LEGAL ANALYSIS

A. Facts

1. Crossroads GPS

Crossroads GPS is a non-profit corporation that was founded on June 1, 2010. Resp. at 7. It applied for 501(c)(4) status as a social welfare organization in September 2010; the Internal Revenue Service ("IRS") has yet to act on its application. Second Supp. Resp. at 3. Crossroads GPS’s current officers and directors are Steven Law (President), Steven Duffield (Vice President for Policy), Sally Vastola (Secretary and Board Member), Bobby Burchfield (Board Member), and Rob Collins (Board Member). See http://www.crossroadsgps.org/leadership-team.

Crossroads GPS’s Articles of Incorporation state that it “is established primarily to further the common good and general welfare of the citizens of the United States of America.” Resp. at 15. Crossroads GPS’s 2010 Tax Return describes its mission as:

Engaging in public communications and direct contact with interested constituencies to advocate policy outcomes on pending legislative and regulatory issues such as: health care reform, taxes, spending and deficits, Congressional reform and energy and environment. The purpose of these issue advocacy and grassroots lobbying activities is to promote policies that strengthen the nation’s economy, reduce regulation of private sector activity, and restore government to a sound financial footing.

See 2010 Tax Return at 1, 43.

According to its Articles of Incorporation, to further its stated mission Crossroads GPS “engag[es] in research, education, and communication efforts regarding policy issues of national 3 Several letters challenging the classification of Crossroads GPS as a 501(c)(4) corporation have been filed with the IRS over the past two years. See, e.g., Letter from Gerald Herbert, Executive Director, Campaign Legal Center, and Fred Wertheimer, President, Democracy 21 to Hon. Douglas H. Shulman, Commissioner, IRS, and Lois Lerner, Director of Exempt Organizations Division, IRS (Sept. 27, 2012), available at http://www.democracy21.org/vertical/sites/97B3D66FAFE-2697-446F-BB39-85FBBBA57812%7D/uploads/IRS_LETTER_CROSSROADS_GPS_Sept_27.pdf.

importance that will impact America's economy and national security in the years ahead." Resp.
at 15. On its website, Crossroads GPS states that it is "a policy and grassroots advocacy organization that is committed to educating, equipping and mobilizing millions of American citizens to take action on the critical economic and legislative issues that will shape our nation's future in the years ahead." See http://www.crossroadsgps.org/about. In its Response, Crossroads GPS proffers that its "primary mission in 2010 and beyond is to advance the '7 in '11' National Action Plan," which "lists seven key priorities for legislative action this fall or in a 'lame-duck' session of Congress or in 2011." Resp. at 16 (quoting "7 in '11' Plan).

Crossroads GPS has a close relationship with what it refers to as a "sister organization," American Crossroads, a Section 527 political organization that registered with the Commission as an independent expenditure-only political committee on August 10, 2010. Crossroads GPS and American Crossroads operate from the same address and share in common at least four corporate officers and employees: (1) Law, who is President of both organizations; (2) Margee Clancy, who is listed as Treasurer for both organizations in their tax filings in 2010 and 2011;
(3) Jonathan Collegio, who is the Communications Director for both organizations; and (4) Carl Forti, who is the Political Director for American Crossroads and the Advocacy Director for Crossroads GPS. Collegio — a spokesman on behalf of both organizations — has emphasized that, despite sharing some employees, the two organizations are distinct entities with separate boards and legal structures. Yet, Collegio also has reportedly stated that the two groups raise funds jointly and that “the fact that we’re raising it for two groups instead of one is a distinction without a difference.”

According to Law’s public statements, the reason for creating two organizations “was that there are a number of things that are priorities for us that seemed to fit more into a 501(c)(4) than a 527, such as doing very legislatively focused issue advocacy activity” and “building out a very substantial grassroots activist network.” Law has also publicly acknowledged, however, that contributor confidentiality provided by section 501(c)(4) is a valuable tool in fundraising.

2. Crossroads GPS’s 2010 and 2011 Activities

According to its publicly-available tax returns, from the founding of Crossroads GPS on June 1, 2010, through the end of 2011, it raised $76,806,799 and spent $64,720,514. Focusing on 2010, Crossroads GPS states that it raised approximately $43.6 million and spent approximately $39.1 million on “communications with the public, pre-production activities in support of these communications, and grants to other non-profit organizations engaged in social welfare activities.” Of the approximately $39.1 million spent, Crossroads GPS

10 Id. Crossroads GPS argues that Law’s statement regarding donor disclosure “is irrelevant to the legal analysis of 'political committee' status.” Second Supp. Resp. at 3.
12 Crossroads GPS’s initial response to the complaint was filed on December 23, 2010. These figures reflect totals through December 15, 2010.
reported spending approximately $15.4 million in independent expenditures in 2010:

$13,259,915.13 for communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of a candidate in seven elections for the U.S. Senate, and $2,185,124.37 for communications expressly advocating the election or defeat of candidates in eight elections for the U.S. House of Representatives. Id. Crossroads GPS maintains that nearly all of its remaining spending in 2010, approximately $23.7 million, was for activities furthering its stated exempt purpose, such as issue advocacy, grassroots lobbying, and educational activities. Id. Thus, Crossroads GPS maintains that 59 percent of its 2010 spending was to further its exempt purpose, 39 percent was for independent expenditures, and two percent was for overhead and administrative expenses. Id. at 7-8.

Crossroads GPS claims that the following 2010 activities furthered its exempt purpose:

- $4.3 million for seven television advertisements airing more than 60 days prior to the 2010 general election: “Worried”; “Calendar”; “Debt Clock”; “Lawsuit”; “Wrong Way”; “Thanks Harry”; and “Hurting.”

- $1,104,783.48 for four electioneering communications: “Debt Clock Long”; “Health/Bad Sign”; “Health/Baby”; and “Jobs/Thanks a Lot.”

- “Hundreds of thousands of dollars” on the radio advertisement “Deal,” urging listeners to contact specified Members of Congress to vote to extend tax cuts and in support of spending cuts.

- An unknown amount on print advertisement supporting S.3773, the Tax Hike Prevention Act.

- An unknown amount on “numerous issue advocacy mailings and phone calls.”

13 Resp. at 8. Federal candidates were identified in each advertisement: “Worried” – Barbara Boxer (CA); “Calendar” and “Debt Clock” – Michael Bennett (CO); “Lawsuit” – Robin Carnahan (MO); “Wrong Way” – Jack Conway (KY); “Thanks, Harry” – Harry Reid (NV); and “Hurting” – Joe Sestak (PA).

14 Resp. at 9. Federal candidates were identified in each of these communications: “Debt Clock Long” – Michael Bennett (CO); “Health/Bad Sign” – Jack Conway (KY); “Health/Baby” – Robin Carnahan (MO), and “Jobs/Thanks a Lot” – Harry Reid (NV). Crossroads GPS notes that some of the electioneering communications were identical to advertisements aired before the electioneering communications window, such as “Debt Clock” and “Debt Clock Long.” Id.

15 Scripts of these communications were not provided with the Response. Crossroads GPS states that it spent $4,500 on express advocacy phone calls that were reported to the Commission, bringing the total spent on Grants to section 501(c)(4) organizations for activities consistent with each organization’s exempt purpose.\(^\text{16}\)

An unknown amount on conducting and publicizing a nationwide public opinion study on extending Bush-era tax rates.\(^\text{17}\)

An unknown amount on building and maintaining the Crossroads GPS website.

An unknown amount on developing and publicizing its “7 in ‘11” National Action Plan, which listed the group’s priorities for legislative action in late 2010 and 2011.

An unknown amount on “extensive research to create lists of citizens who are concerned about issues.”\(^\text{18}\)

Id. at 8-13.

In its Supplemental Response, Crossroads GPS states that, from December 2010 through August 2011, it did not “engage[] in any express advocacy,” but rather “devoted substantial resources to a variety of issue advocacy, watchdog and accountability projects.” Supp. Resp. at 1. Its principal project during that time was the “Jobs, Economy, and Debt Initiative,” a series of advertisements criticizing President Obama and several members of Congress and the Senate, on which Crossroads GPS spent approximately $20 million. Id.: at 4-6.

The 2010 Tax Return, which covers activity from June 1, 2010, through May 31, 2011, states that Crossroads GPS gave grants totaling $15,860,000. 2010 Tax Return at 2. It is unclear how much of this was spent during calendar year 2010 and how much was spent during 2011. Crossroads GPS states that “grants are accompanied by a letter of transmittal stating that the funds are to be used only for exempt purposes, and not for political expenditures, consistent with the organization’s tax-exempt mission.” 2010 Tax Return at 40.

The group spent a total of $1,410,141 on “research to determine how various demographic groups respond to current national policy issues, what priorities and concerns they have, and which public policy issues they might be most inclined to take action on through grassroots participation.” See 2010 Tax Return at 2; 2011 Tax Return at 2. This activity may have been part of this category of expenses.

Resp. at 12-13.
Crossroads GPS argues that all of this activity shows that it does not have as its major purpose the nomination or election of federal candidates, and therefore it is not a political committee under the Act and Commission regulations.

B. Analysis

1. The Test for Political Committee Status

The Act and Commission regulations define a “political committee” as “any committee, club, association or other group of persons which receives contributions aggregating in excess of $1,000 during a calendar year or which makes expenditures aggregating in excess of $1,000 during a calendar year.” 2 U.S.C. § 431(4)(A); 11 C.F.R. § 100.5. In Buckley v. Valeo, 424 U.S. 1 (1976), the Supreme Court held that defining political committee status “only in terms of the annual amount of ‘contributions’ and ‘expenditures’” might be overbroad, reaching “groups engaged purely in issue discussion.” Id. at 79. To cure that infirmity, the Court concluded that the term “political committee” “need only encompass organizations that are under the control of a candidate or the major purpose of which is the nomination or election of a candidate.” Id. (emphasis added). Accordingly, under the statute as thus construed, an organization that is not controlled by a candidate must register as a political committee only if (1) it crosses the $1,000 threshold and (2) it has as its “major purpose” the nomination or election of federal candidates.

a. The Commission’s Case-By-Case Approach to Major Purpose

Although Buckley established the major purpose test, it provided no guidance as to the proper approach to determine an organization’s major purpose. See, e.g., Real Truth About Abortion, Inc. v. FEC, 681 F.3d 544, 556 (4th Cir. 2012), petition for cert. filed, 81 U.S.L.W. 3127 (U.S. Sept. 10, 2012) (No. 12-311) (“RTAA”). The Supreme Court’s discussion of major purpose in a subsequent opinion, Massachusetts Citizens for Life v. FEC, 479 U.S. 238 (1986) MCFL"), was similarly sparse. See id. at 262. In that case, the Court identified an organization's independent spending as a relevant factor in determining an organization's major purpose, but examined the entire record as part of its analysis and did not chart the outer bounds of the test. 479 U.S. at 238. Following Buckley and MCFL, lower courts have refined the major purpose test — but only to a limited extent. In large measure, the contours of political committee status — and the major purpose test — have been left to the Commission.

Following Buckley, the Commission adopted a policy of determining on a case-by-case basis whether an organization is a political committee, including whether its major purpose is the nomination or election of federal candidates. Political Committee Status, 72 Fed. Reg. 5596
(Feb. 7, 2007) (Supplemental Explanation and Justification). The Commission has periodically considered proposed rulemakings that would have determined major purpose by reference to a bright-line rule — such as proportional (i.e., 50%) or aggregate threshold amounts spent by an organization on federal campaign activity. But the Commission consistently has declined to adopt such bright-line rules. See Independent Expenditures; Corporate and Labor Organization (Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking). See also, Summary of Comments and Possible

See FEC v. Machinists Non-Partisan Political League, 655 F.2d 380, 396 (D.C. Cir. 1981) (stating that political committee 'contribution limitations did not apply to . . . groups whose activities did not support an existing 'candidate'' and finding Commission's subpoena was overly intrusive where directed toward "draft" group lacking a "candidate" to support); FEC v. GOPAC, Inc., 917 F. Supp. 851, 861-62 (D.D.C. 1996) (holding that a group's support of a "farm team" of future potential federal candidates at the state and local level did not make it a political committee under the Act); see also Unity08 v. FEC, 596 F.3d 861, 869 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (concluding that an organization "is not subject to regulation as a political committee unless and until it selects a 'clearly identified' candidate").

Like other administrative agencies, the Commission has the inherent authority to interpret its statute between proceeding by general rule or by individual . . . litigation is one that lies primarily in the informed discretion of the administrative agency.")
Options on the Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking on the Definition of "Political Committee," Certification (Sept. 27, 2001) (voting 6-0 to hold proposed rulemaking in abeyance).

In 2004, for example, the Commission issued a notice of proposed rulemaking asking whether the agency should adopt a regulatory definition of "political committee." See Political Committee Status: 69 Fed. Reg. 11,736, 11,745-49 (Mar. 11, 2004) (Notice of Proposed Rulemaking). The Commission declined to adopt a bright-line rule, noting that it had been applying the major purpose test "for many years without additional regulatory definitions," and concluded that "it will continue to do so in the future." See Final Rules on Political Committee Status, Definition of Contribution, and Allocation for Separate Segregated Funds and Nonconnected Committees, 69 Fed. Reg. 68056, 68064-65 (Nov. 23, 2004).

When the Commission's 2004 decision not to adopt a regulatory definition was challenged in litigation, the court rejected plaintiffs' request that the Commission initiate a new rulemaking. Shays v. FEC, 424 F. Supp. 2d 100, 117 (D.D.C. 2006) ("Shays I"). The district court found, however, that the Commission had "failed to present a reasoned explanation for its decision" to engage in case-by-case decision-making, rather than rulemaking, and remanded the case to the Commission to explain its decision. Id. at 116-17.

Responding to the remand, the Commission issued a Supplemental Explanation and Justification for its final rules on political committee status to further explain its case-by-case approach and provide the public with additional guidance as to its process for determining political committee status. Political Committee Status, 72 Fed. Reg. 5595 (Feb. 7, 2007) ("Supplemental E&J"). The Supplemental E&J explained that "the major purpose doctrine requires fact-intensive analysis of a group’s campaign activities compared to its activities unrelated to campaigns." Id. at 5601-02. The Commission concluded that the determination of an organization’s major purpose “requires the flexibility of a case-by-case analysis of an organization’s conduct that is incompatible with a one-size fits-all rule,” and that “any list of factors developed by the Commission would not likely be exhaustive in any event, as evidenced by the multitude of fact patterns at issue in the Commission’s enforcement actions considering the political committee status of various entities.” Id.

To determine an entity’s “major purpose,” the Commission explained that it considers a group’s “overall conduct,” including public statements about its mission, organizational documents, government filings (e.g., IRS notices), the proportion of spending related to “federal campaign activity,” and the extent to which fundraising solicitations indicate funds raised will be used to support or oppose specific candidates. Id. at 5597, 5605. Among other things, the Commission informed the public that it compares how much of an organization’s spending is for “federal campaign activity” relative to “activities that [a]re not campaign related.” Id. at 5601, 5605 (emphasis added).

To provide the public with additional guidance, the Supplemental E&J referenced enforcement actions on the public record, as well as advisory opinions and filings in civil enforcement cases following the 2004 rulemaking. Id. at 5604-05. The Commission noted that the settlements in several MURs involving section 527 organizations “provide considerable guidance to all organizations” regarding the application of the major purpose test and “reduce any claim of uncertainty because concrete factual examples of the Committee’s political committee analysis are now part of the public record.” Id. at 5595, 5604.
After the Commission issued the Supplemental E&J, the Shays I plaintiffs again challenged, under the Administrative Procedure Act, 5 U.S.C. §§ 551-59, the Commission’s case-by-case approach to political committee status. The court rejected the challenge, upholding the Commission’s case-by-case approach as an appropriate exercise of the agency’s discretion. Shays v. FEC, 511 F. Supp. 2d 19, 24 (D.D.C. 2007) ("Shays II”). The court recognized that “an organization . . . may engage in many non-electoral activities so that determining its major purpose requires a very close examination of various activities and statements.” Id. at 31.

Recently, the Fourth Circuit rejected a constitutional challenge to the Commission’s case-by-case determination of major purpose. The court upheld the Commission’s approach, finding that Buckley “did not mandate a particular methodology for determining an organization’s major purpose,” and so the Commission was free to make that determination “either through categorical rules or through individualized adjudications.” RTAA, 681 F.3d at 556. The court concluded that the Commission’s case-by-case approach was “sensible, . . . consistent with Supreme Court precedent and does not unlawfully deter protected speech.” Id. at 558. The Fourth Circuit concluded that the Supplemental E&J provides “ample guidance as to the criteria the Commission might consider” in determining an organization’s political committee status and 21 The RTAA court rejected an argument — similar to the one made by Crossroads GPS here — that the major purpose test must be confined to "(1) examining an organization’s expenditures to see if campaign-related speech amounts to 50% of all expenditures; or (2) reviewing ‘the organization’s central purpose revealed by its organic documents.’" RTAA, 681 F.3d at 555. The Fourth Circuit recognized that determining an organization’s major purpose "is inherently a comparative task, and in most instances it will require weighing some of the group’s activities against others." Id. at 556; see also Koerber v. FEC, 483 F. Supp. 2d 740 (E.D.N.C. 2008) (denying preliminary relief in challenge to Commission’s approach to determining political committee status, and noting that "an organization’s ‘major purpose’ is inherently comparative and necessarily requires an understanding of an organization’s overall activities, as opposed to its stated purpose"); FEC v. Malinick, 310 F. Supp. 2d 230, 234-37 (D.D.C. 2004) (considering organization’s statements in brochures and “fax alerts” sent to potential and actual contributors, as well as its spending influencing federal elections); FEC v. GOPAC, Inc., 917 F. Supp. 851, 859 (D.D.C. 1996) ("The organization’s purpose may be evidenced by its public statements of its purpose or by other means, such as its expenditures in cash or in kind to or for the benefit of a particular candidate or candidates."); id. at 864, 866 (applying a fact-intensive inquiry, including review of organizations’ meetings attended by national leaders and organization’s “Political Strategy Campaign Plan and Budget,” and concluding that organization did not have as its major purpose the election of federal candidates).

therefore is not unconstitutionally vague. Id. See also Free Speech v. FEC, No. 12-CV-127-SWS at 22 (D. Wy. Oct. 3, 2012) (citing RTAA and finding Commission's method of determining political committee status to be constitutional), appeal docketed, No. 12-8078 (10th

c. Organizational and Reporting Requirements for Political Committees

Political committees — commonly known as “PACs” — must comply with certain organizational and reporting requirements set forth in the Act. PACs must register with the Commission, file periodic reports for disclosure to the public, appoint a treasurer who maintains its records, and identify themselves through “disclaimers” on all of their political advertising, on their websites, and in mass e-mails. See 2 U.S.C. §§ 432-34; 11 C.F.R. §110.11(a)(1). The Act’s reporting requirements “are minimal” and the organizational requirements are not “much of an additional burden.” SpeechNow.org v. FEC, F.3d 686, 696 (D.C. Cir. 2010) (“SpeechNow”). These requirements, which promote disclosure, do not, of course, prohibit

In the wake of the Supreme Court’s decision in Citizens United v. FEC, 130 S. Ct. 876 (2010), which struck down the Act’s prohibitions on corporate independent expenditures and

22 The Supreme Court’s decision in FCC v. Fox Television Stations, Inc. 132 S. Ct. 2307 (2012) is not to the contrary. See id. at 2317 ("[A] regulation is not vague because it may at times be difficult to prove an incriminating fact but rather because it is unclear as to what fact must be proved"). In that case, the FCC’s indecency standard was held to be vague for lack of notice when it applied a new stricter standard, ex post facto, to the Fox defendants, and when it relied on a single “isolated and ambiguous statement” from a 50-year old administrative decision to support its finding of indecency against the ABC defendants. Id. at 13-17. Here, in sharp contrast, the Supplemental E&J — which was issued several years before Crossroads GPS was formed — provides extensive guidance as the Commission’s approach to major purpose, and has withstood both APA and constitutional challenges. See also Center for Individual Freedom v. Madigan, 697 F.3d 464 (7th Cir. Sept. 10, 2012) ("Madigan") (rejecting vagueness challenge to the definition of “political committee” in the Illinois campaign finance statute).

23 An organization must register as a political committee when it crosses the $1,000 threshold and determines, based on the guidance in the Supplemental E&J, that it has the requisite major purpose.
electioneering communications, the D.C. Circuit held in SpeechNow that political committees that engage only in independent expenditures are not subject to contribution limits. See 599 F.3d at 696. These political committees, often referred to as independent expenditure-only political committees or Super PACs, continue to be subject, however, to the “minimal” “reporting requirements of 2 U.S.C. §§ 432, 433, and 434(a), and the organizational requirements of 2 U.S.C. §§ 431(4) and 431(8).” Id. at 689.

Notably, the Supreme Court has stressed that such requirements serve the vital role of disclosure in political discourse. See Citizens United, 130 S. Ct. at 916 (recognizing that increased “transparency” resulting from FECA disclosure requirements “enables the electorate to make informed decisions and give proper weight to different speakers and messages”); Doe v. Reed, 561 U.S. __, 130 S. Ct. 2811, 2820 (2010) (holding that public disclosure of state referendum petitions serves important government interest of “promot[ing] transparency and accountability in the electoral process,” and “preserving the integrity of the electoral process”); Madigan, 697 F.3d at __ (upholding Illinois’s campaign finance disclosure provisions against constitutional facial challenge, finding a substantial relation to “Illinois’s interest in informing its electorate about who is speaking before an election”); see also Doe, 130 S. Ct. at 2837 (Scalia, J., concurring) (“Requiring people to stand up in public for their political acts fosters civic courage, without which democracy is doomed.”).

24 But cf. Minn. Citizens for Life, Inc. v. Swanson, 692 F.3d 864, 876 (8th Cir. 2012) (striking down certain registration and disclosure provisions of Minnesota’s campaign finance law, finding that those obligations as applied to associations that do not meet Buckley’s “major purpose test” are unduly burdensome and do not match any “sufficiently important disclosure interest”).
2. Application of the Test for Political Committee Status to Crossroads GPS

   a. Statutory Threshold

   To assess whether an organization has made an "expenditure," the Commission "analyzes whether expenditures for any of an organization's communications made independently of a candidate constitute express advocacy either under 11 C.F.R. § 100.22(a), or the broader definition at 11 C.F.R. § 100.22(b)." Supplemental E&J at 5606. According to the Response, Crossroads GPS spent either $15,455,039.50 or $15,749,171.00 on reported independent expenditures in 2010. Resp. at 7, 13. Thus, Crossroads GPS far exceeded the $1,000 statutory threshold for political committee status.

   b. Major Purpose

   Crossroads GPS states in its Response, on its website, and in its tax returns that its major purpose is not federal campaign activity but rather advocacy of issues and education of the public. Resp. at 1. The Commission noted in the Supplemental E&J that it may consider such statements in its analysis of an organization's major purpose, Supplemental E&J at 5606, but that such statements are not necessarily dispositive. See Real Truth About Obama v. FEC, No. 3:08-cv-00483, 2008 WL 4416282, at *14 (E.D. Va. Sept. 24, 2008) ("A declaration by the organization that they are not [organized] for an electioneering purpose is not dispositive.") (emphasis in original, alteration added), aff'd, 575 F.3d 342 (4th Cir. 2009), vacated on other grounds, 130 S. Ct. 2371 (2010), remanded and decided, 796 F. Supp. 2d 736, affirmed sub nom. Real Truth About Abortion v. FEC, 681 F.3d 544 (4th Cir. 2012), petition for cert. filed, 81 U.S.L.W. 3127 (U.S. Sept. 10, 2012) (No. 12-311). Under the Commission's case-by-case approach, the Commission considers the organization's "overall conduct," including its disbursements, activities, and statements. Supplemental E&J at 5597. In this case, Crossroads GPS's proportion of spending related to federal campaign activity is alone sufficient to establish that its major purpose in 2010 was the nomination or election of federal candidates.

Crossroads GPS reported spending at least $15,445,039.50 on independent expenditures in 2010. In addition, the available information indicates that Crossroads GPS spent approximately $5.4 million in 2010 on communications that do not contain express advocacy but criticize or oppose a clearly identified federal candidate. Resp. at 8-9. In past enforcement actions, the Commission has determined that funds spent on communications that support or oppose a clearly identified federal candidate, but do not contain express advocacy, should be considered in determining whether that group has federal campaign activity as its major purpose.25

For example, the Commission has relied, in part, on the following advertisements in determining that an entity was a political committee:

- "Child's Pay": The advertisement contains "images of children performing labor-intensive jobs: washing dishes in a restaurant kitchen, vacuuming a hotel hallway, working on an assembly line in a factory, collecting garbage, working at an auto repair shop, and checking groceries," and concludes with the question: "Guess who's going to pay off President Bush's $1 trillion deficit?"26

25 See Conciliation Agreement ¶ IV.11, MUR 5754 (MoveOn.org Voter Fund) (relying on funds used for advertisements that "opposed" or "criticized" George W. Bush to establish political committee status); Factual and Legal Analysis at 2, MUR 5753 (League of Conservation Voters 527) (finding major purpose satisfied where funds spent on door-to-door and phone bank express advocacy campaign, and also on advertisements "supporting or opposing clearly identified federal candidates, some of which contained express advocacy"); Conciliation Agreement ¶ IV.14, MUR 5487 (Progress for America Voter Fund) (concluding that PFA VF had met the major purpose test after spending 60 percent of its funds on communications that "praised George W. Bush's leadership as President and/or criticized Senator Kerry's ability to provide similar leadership"); see also FEC v. Citizens Club for Growth, Inc., Stipulation for Entry of Consent Judgment ¶ 22 (Sept. 6, 2007) (entering stipulation of Commission, approved as part of a consent judgment, where organization was treated as a political committee because "the vast majority of [the group's disbursements] were made in connection with federal elections, including, but not limited to, funding for candidate research, polling, and advertisements and other public communications referencing a clearly identified federal candidate").

“70 Billion More”: The advertisement shows images of a young boy sitting at a school desk and a young girl with a thermometer in her mouth. The voice-over states: “We could build thousands of new schools, or hire a million new teachers. We could make sure every child has insurance. Instead, George Bush has spent $150 billion in Iraq and has a secret plan to ask for $70 billion more. But after four years it’s now clear: George Bush has no plan for taking care of America. Face it. George Bush is not on our side.”^27

“Jobs”: “Is George Bush listening to us? Since taking office, he’s let oil and energy companies call the shots. Special exemptions from the Clean Water and Clean Air Acts. Halliburton collecting billions in no-bid contracts. Here in Wisconsin, 52,500 manufacturing jobs lost. America is going in the wrong direction. And George Bush just listens to the special interests.”^28

“Yucca You Decide”: “Yucca Mountain. While everyone plays politics, who’s looking out for Nevada? Eighty-five percent of the nuclear waste could come through Las Vegas. Past businesses. Through communities. By our schools. Accidents happen, and if so, how could Las Vegas, a city and economy built on tourism, recover? Who would come visit us then? The question: did George W. Bush really try and stop Yucca Mountain? Or was he just playing politics?”^29

“Finish It”: [On screen: Images of Mohammed Atta, Osama bin Laden, Khalid Sheik Mohammed, Nick Berg’s killers, and victims of terrorist attacks.] “These people want to kill us. They killed hundreds of innocent children in Russia. Two hundred innocent commuters in Spain. And 3,000 innocent Americans. John Kerry has a 30-year record of supporting cuts in defense and intelligence and endlessly changed positions on Iraq. Would you trust Kerry against these fanatic killers? President Bush didn’t start this war, but he will finish it.”^30

“Ashley’s Story”: This advertisement recounts the story of Ashley Faulkner, whose mother was killed in the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks, and the interaction she had with President George W. Bush during a visit to Ohio. It closes with Ashley Faulkner’s father stating: “What I saw was what I want to see in the heart and in the soul of the man who sits in the highest elected office in our country.\textsuperscript{31}

The Commission found that each of these advertisements — though not express advocacy indicated that the respondents had as their major purpose the nomination or election of federal candidates. These ads evidenced that the organization's major purpose was federal campaign activity because they "support," "oppose," "praise," or "criticize" the federal candidates.
Supplemental E&J at 5601.

Likewise, the following advertisements on which Crossroads spent some $5.4 million in 2010 (Resp. at 8-9), though not express advocacy, oppose or criticize federal candidates and therefore provide evidence that Crossroads GPS had as its major purpose the nomination or election of federal candidates.

i. "\textit{Worried}\textsuperscript{32}"

California seniors are worried. Barbara Boxer voted to cut spending on Medicare benefits by $500 billion. Cuts so costly to hospitals and nursing homes that they could stop taking Medicare altogether. Boxer's cuts would sharply reduce benefits for some and could jeopardize access to care for millions of others. And millions of Americans won't be able to keep the plan or doctor they already have. Check the facts and take action.
Call Boxer. Stop the Medicare cuts.\textsuperscript{32}

ii. "\textit{Calendar}\textsuperscript{33}"

Michael Bennet's spending spree. Since his appointment, Bennet has voted to spend $2.5 billion every single day. Spending billions of your tax dollars on everything, from the failed stimulus, billions in government pork, even cash for clunkers. And to pay for some of it? Bennet voted twice in 35 days to increase the national debt. Bennet's way: spend more, borrow more, and then raise our taxes. Michael Bennet's spending spree.
Call Senator Bennet. Stop the spending.\textsuperscript{33}

iii. "Debt Clock"/"Debt Clock Long"\textsuperscript{34}

Coloradans are in debt to Washington—deeply in debt. Big spenders like Michael Bennet are spending an average $2.5 billion per day. Wasting billions on pork and the failed stimulus program. The result: over 100,000 Colorado jobs lost. Bankruptcies at a five-year high. And our national debt is hitting numbers that could break this country. Now Bennet has admitted, "in my view, we have nothing to show for it." Ya think? Call. Tell Bennet to stop the spending spree.\textsuperscript{35}

iv. "Lawsuit"

The message is clear: seventy-one percent of Missouri voters don't want government-mandated health care. We want to make our own health care decisions. But Robin Carnahan disagrees. While seventy-one percent of us voted no, Carnahan sided with lobbyists, big unions, and Washington insiders to force "Obamacare" on us. Missouri's lieutenant governor is suing the federal government so we can keep our health care. Tell Carnahan to get in touch with Missourians and support the health care challenge.\textsuperscript{36}

v. "Wrong Way"

"Obamacare" is taking health care in the wrong direction, and Jack Conway has gone the wrong way, too. Conway endorsed "Obamacare," with its higher taxes and Medicare cuts, and Conway refused to join thirteen other attorneys general and defend Kentucky from Obama's health care mandate. "Obamacare" and Jack Conway are taking Kentucky's health care down the wrong road. Tell Jack Conway: turn around, stop defending "Obamacare," and protect Kentucky from the federal insurance mandate.\textsuperscript{37}

vi. "Thanks Harry"

"Obamacare" is bad for health care in America. And worse for Nevada. Because when Senator Harry Reid needed votes to push "Obamacare," he cut sweet deals across the country to help Nebraska, to help Louisiana, to even help Florida. What has Nevada gotten from Senator Reid? Record foreclosure and the highest unemployment rate in the nation. And Reid's still pushing for more government control of your health care. Really, Harry, how about some help for Nevada?

vii. "Hurting"

viii. "Bad Sign"

"Obamacare" is the wrong way for Kentucky. And Jack Conway is going the wrong way, too. "Obamacare" means $525 billion in job-killing taxes. It means higher insurance premiums. $500 billion cut from Medicare. Reduced benefits for 113,000 Kentucky seniors. And intrusive big government mandates. It's the wrong way, Conway.

ix. "Baby"

She begins her life in the care of others, but what kind of care will be there in her future? Missourians want to make their own health care decisions, but Robin Carnahan disagrees. She supports the "Obamacare" law that could raise our health insurance premiums and cuts billions from Medicare. Now our lieutenant governor is suing so her health care will be there. Tell Carnahan: start fighting for Missouri. Fight against "Obamacare."

x. "Thanks a Lot"

With spending already out of control, Harry Reid spearheaded the stimulus spending bill. Harry's stimulus sent nearly $2 million to California to collect ants in Africa, $25 million for new chairlifts and help for Nevada?

Crossroads GPS argues in its Response that none of the above communications can be classified as express advocacy under either 11 C.F.R. §§ 100.22(a) or 100.22(b) and that each of the four electioneering communications qualifies as an “issue ad” under Wisconsin Right to Life, Inc. v. FEC, 551 U.S. 449 (2007) (distinguishing “issue ads” from those that are the “functional equivalent of express advocacy.”). As discussed above, however, that argument fails to come to terms with the Commission’s longstanding view — upheld by the courts — that the required major purpose test is not limited solely to express advocacy (or the functional equivalent of express advocacy). Each of the Crossroads GPS ads features a clearly identified federal candidate, criticizes or opposes a candidate, and was run in the candidate’s respective state shortly before the 2010 elections. The fact that the ads do not contain express advocacy, or the functional equivalent, does not shield such ads from consideration under the major purpose test.

Nor does Buckley support an argument that determining an organization’s major purpose is limited to consideration of its express advocacy. The Court first established the major purpose test in the context of its discussion of Section 434(e) — a provision that required the disclosure of expenditures by persons other than political committees. In order to cure vagueness concerns in that section, the Court construed “expenditure” to reach only express advocacy. Id. at 79-80.

See http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=3FlIX0_trLk&feature=plcp.

Similarly, the fact that each of the ads contains a tag line requesting that the viewer call the candidate and tell the candidate to take certain action (i.e., “Tell Carnahan: start fighting for Missouri. Fight against ‘Obamacare’”) does not immunize the communications from being considered federal campaign activity when determining major purpose.
By contrast, limiting which expenditures political committees would have to disclose, the Court held that the term "political committee" — as defined in Section 431(d) — "need only encompass organizations that are under the control of a candidate or the major purpose of which is the nomination or election of a candidate." Id. at 79. Thus, the two limitations were imposed on two different terms in two different sections of the Act: (1) "express advocacy" as a limitation on "expenditures" made by persons other than political committees pursuant to Section 434(e); and (2) "major purpose" as a limitation on the definition of "political committee" pursuant to Section 431(d). The opinion could have articulated a test that linked the limitations — requiring, for example, that to be considered a political committee an organization's "major purposed must be to expressly advocate the nomination or election of a candidate." But the Court did not take that tack. Indeed, the Court noted that even "partisan committees," which include "groups within the control of the candidate or primarily organized for political activities" would fall outside the definition of "political committee" only if they fail to meet the statutory spending threshold. Id. at 80 (emphasis added).

Similarly, in MCFL, the Court's opinion nowhere suggests that express advocacy communications are the only kind of "campaign activity" that can satisfy the major purpose test. See MCFL, 479 U.S. at 252-53, 262 (political committee requirements inapplicable to "organizations whose major purpose is not campaign advocacy," but "political committee" does include organizations with a major purpose of "campaign activity") (emphasis added). And many lower federal courts have likewise decided that a determination of major purpose is not restricted to consideration of a group's express advocacy as compared to its other activities.\(^{44}\)

\(^{44}\) See North Carolina Right to Life v. Leake, 525 F.3d 274, 289 (4th Cir. 2008) (major purpose test may be implemented by examining, inter alia, "if the organization spends the majority of its money on supporting or opposing candidates") (emphasis added); Akins v. FEC, 101 F.3d 731, 742 (D.C. Cir. 1997) ("an organization devoted almost entirely to campaign spending could not plead that the administrative burdens associated with such...*) Crossroads GPS also argues in its Response that, "[g]iven the rough equivalence of the IRS 'primary purpose' test and the FEC's 'major purpose' test, a Section 501(c)(4) organization that is in compliance with IRS standards should [not] be found to satisfy the FEC's 'political committee' test." Resp. at 2. The Commission has determined previously, however, that "neither FECA, as amended, nor any judicial decision interpreting it, has substituted tax status for the conduct-based determination required for political committee status." Supplemental E&J at 5999. Rather, when interpreting and applying the Act, the Commission has concluded that "a detailed examination of each organization's contributions, expenditures, and major purpose" is the proper approach, as described in detail above. Id. Moreover, the argument is at best premature, since the IRS has not yet determined whether to grant Crossroads GPS's application for 501(c)(4) status, which is now being challenged. See supra n.3.

Crossroads GPS further argues that the FEC should apply the major purpose test to activity that occurred during the group's fiscal tax year, which ran from June 1, 2010, to May 31, 2011. A calendar year, however, not a self-selected fiscal year, provides the firmest statutory spending were unconstitutional as applied to it"), vacated on other grounds, 524 U.S. 11 (1998) (emphasis added);

Cir. 1981) (recognizing "the grave constitutional difficulties inherent in construing the term 'political committee' to include groups whose activities are not . . . directly related to promoting or defeating a clearly identified 'candidate' for federal office") (emphasis added); RTAA, 796 F. Supp. 2d 736, 751 (E.D. Va. 2011) (Recognizing that "the FEC considers whether the group spends money extensively on campaign activities such as canvassing or phone banks, or on express advocacy communications" and "the FEC is entitled to consider the full range of an organization's activities in deciding whether it is a political committee"), affirmed by 681 F.3d 544 (4th Cir. June 12, 2012); Free Speech v. FEC, No. 12-CV-127-SWS at 22 (D. Wy. Oct. 3, 2012) (quoting RTAA and upholding Commission's case-by-case method of determining political committee status), appeal docketed, No. 12-8078 (10th Cir. Oct. 19, 2012). But see New Mexico Youth Organised v. Herrera, 611 F.3d 669, 678 (10th Cir. 2010) (interpreting Buckley's major purpose test as establishing that regulation as a political committee is only constitutionally permissible (1) when an organization's central purpose is "campaign or election related"; or (2) when a "preponderance of [the organization's] expenditures is for express advocacy or contributions to candidates."); Statement of Reasons, Comm'rs. Petersen and Hunter at 6, MUR 5842 (Economic Freedom Fund) (interpreting the Court's major purpose requirement to mean that "the Act does not reach these 'engaged purely in issue discussion,' but instead can only reach . . . 'communications that expressly advocate the election or defeat of a clearly identified candidate'") (citing Buckley, 424 U.S. at 79-80); see also Colorado Right to Life Comm., Inc. v. Coffinen, 498 F.3d 1137, 1154 (10th Cir. 2007) (holding a Colorado statute unconstitutional as applied because it "would, as a matter of common sense, operate to encompass a variety of entities based on an expenditure that is insubstantial in relation to their overall budgets").
footing for the Commission’s major purpose determination — and is consistent with FECA’s plain language. The Act defines “political committee” in terms of expenditures made or contributions received "during a calendar year." 2 U.S.C. § 431(4) (emphasis added). A calendar year test is therefore consistent with the Act’s plain language.

Moreover, using a calendar year as the statutory basis for defining “political committee” as required by the Act but not as the basis for examining major purpose, as Crossroads GPS suggests, could lead to absurd results. For example, two groups with identical spending patterns could be evaluated differently if one group ended its fiscal tax year on May 31 and the other’s fiscal tax year ended on December 31. The possibility of such an incongruous result is underscored by the ability of a nonprofit organization to change its tax filing period with the IRS — Crossroads in fact did so in 2011. Crossroads GPS’s fiscal tax year now coincides with the calendar year.

Finally, examining a group’s spending with reference to a calendar year, rather than a fiscal year, is consistent with the Commission’s actions in the enforcement matters cited as guidance in the 2007 Supplemental E&J. In two matters cited by the 2007 Supplemental E&J — and in one concluded shortly thereafter — the Commission focused on the group’s activity during the 2004 calendar year for that election to determine major purpose, and only used the groups’ later activity to assess their ongoing reporting obligations as political committees.45 The 45 For example, in MUR 5487 (Progress for America Voter Fund), the Commission’s major purpose analysis of the group’s spending was based on the funds raised and spent “before the 2004 General Election.” See Conciliation Agreement ¶¶ 33-36, MUR 5487 (Progress for America Voter Fund). The Commission limited its analysis to activity during 2004 even though Progress for America Voter Fund had raised approximately $4.6 million and spent approximately $11.2 million since the 2004 presidential election. See id. ¶ 18. The Commission has also noted when groups cease to function after an election cycle. See Conciliation Agreement ¶ 16, MUR 5754 (MoveOn.org Voter Fund); Conciliation Agreement ¶ 36, MURs 5511, 5525 (Swift Boat Veterans and POWs for Truth).

Commission, however, has not routinely examined a group's post-election activity unless such activity implicated its ongoing obligations under the Act.\(^{46}\)

Thus, whether Crossroads GPS had the requisite major purpose should be determined by reference to its activities during the 2010 calendar year. But even if the Commission were to consider Crossroads GPS's 2011 activity, the inclusion of that activity in the major purpose analysis would not alter our recommendation. Crossroads GPS's 2011 spending further demonstrates that its major purpose is federal campaign activity (i.e., the nomination or election of a federal candidate), as the bulk of the organization's spending was for the type of advertisements that the Commission has considered indicative of major purpose in past enforcement matters.

* * * *

In short, taking into account all of its spending in 2010, Crossroads GPS appears to have spent approximately $20.8 million on the type of communications that the Commission considers to be federal campaign activity — approximately $15.4 million on express advocacy communications and $5.4 million on non-express advocacy communications that criticize or oppose a clearly identified federal candidate.\(^{47}\) This total of $20.8 million represents approximately 53 percent of the $39.1 million Crossroads GPS reported spending during 2010.

\(^{46}\) Not surprisingly, many political committee enforcement matters involve groups that only spend funds during the calendar year of an election, and that spending thus necessarily forms the sole basis for major purpose analysis.

\(^{47}\) The Commission does not have sufficient information to determine whether some of the other categories of 2010 spending, such as the grants Crossroads GPS issues, would also qualify as federal campaign activity.
Therefore, Crossroads GPS's spending by itself shows that the group's major purpose during 2010 was federal campaign activity (i.e., the nomination or election of a federal candidate).^48

C. Conclusion

Crossroads GPS made over $1,000 in expenditures during 2010, and its spending during that calendar year indicates that it had as its major purpose federal campaign activity (i.e., the nomination or election of federal candidates). Accordingly, we recommend that the Commission find reason to believe that Crossroads GPS violated 2 U.S.C. §§ 432, 433, and 434, by failing to organize, register, and report as a political committee, and that the Commission authorize an investigation. Although we believe there is sufficient information at this stage to recommend pre-probable cause conciliation based solely on Crossroads GPS's spending for advertisements, as detailed herein, an investigation of Crossroads GPS's additional 2010 activity, including examination of its fundraising solicitations and advocacy mailings, may furnish evidence of additional spending on federal campaign activity that will enhance the public record and establish definitively the date by which Crossroads GPS should have registered as a political committee.

^48 In reaching this conclusion, we do not intend to express the view that a finding of major purpose requires clearance of a 50 percent threshold, but only that the spending on federal campaign activity in this case is alone sufficient to support a finding of major purpose.
III. PROPOSED DISCOVERY

We plan to seek information (1) to establish the extent, nature, and cost of Crossroads GPS’s federal campaign activity and (2) to identify potential witnesses who may have relevant knowledge of these facts. We also request that the Commission authorize the use of compulsory process, including the issuance of appropriate interrogatories, document subpoenas, and deposition subpoenas, as necessary. The information sought through any discovery would be focused on ascertaining the scope of Crossroads GPS’s reporting obligations, and would be consistent with the type of information that the Commission seeks in its analysis of a group’s requirements as a political committee.
IV. RECOMMENDATIONS

2. Approve the attached Factual and Legal Analysis.

3. Authorize the use of compulsory process in this matter.

4. Approve the appropriate letters.
