COMPLAINT

The Campaign Legal Center, Common Cause, and Sunlight Foundation¹ file this complaint regarding violations of the Communications Act and the Federal Communications Commission's ("FCC") regulations by Scripps Media, Inc., licensee of WTMJ-TV. WTMJ-TV is an NBC broadcast television station in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

In November 2015, WTMJ-TV aired political advertisements identified as paid for by Independence USA PAC ("Independence"). Despite the fact that even a cursory search of the public record would have shown that Michael Bloomberg is the sole funder of Independence USA PAC, WTMJ-TV did not identify Michael Bloomberg as the sponsor of the advertisements or, evidently, make inquiry of Independence USA of its sources of funding, and instead identified the sponsor of the ads as "Independence USA PAC."

On November 19, 2015, while the advertisements were still running on WTMJ-TV, Complainants provided evidence directly to WTMJ-TV establishing that Independence USA

PAC was not the ad’s true sponsor.² Specifically, Complainants provided evidence that Michael Bloomberg has provided 100 per cent of Independence’s funding since its creation. Despite being furnished with such evidence, WTMJ-TV failed to acknowledge its violation or change the sponsorship identification on Independence advertising.

By failing to identify Michael Bloomberg as the sponsor of the ads, WTMJ-TV did not “fully and fairly disclose the true identity” of the ad’s sponsor on-air, and did not exercise reasonable diligence to obtain information about the source of Independence’s funds as required by Section 317 of the Communications Act and Section 73.1212 of the FCC’s regulations—even after being provided this information by Complainants.

I. On-air disclosure requirements.

Section 317 of the Communications Act requires that broadcast licensees determine the identity of the sponsor of any advertisement for which money is directly or indirectly paid and disclose this information at the time the ad is broadcast.³ The law requires broadcasters to use “reasonable diligence to obtain from its employees, and from other persons with whom it deals directly in connection with [the ad], information to enable” the broadcaster to make the on-air disclosure.⁴ The statute requires broadcasters, at a minimum, to determine the identity of the sponsor by asking its employees or employees of the advertising agency.

The FCC has implemented Section 317 with rules specifying that broadcasters must disclose when an ad is directly or indirectly paid for and “by whom . . . such consideration was supplied.”⁵ Under the FCC’s rules, broadcasters “shall exercise reasonable diligence” to “fully and fairly disclose the true identity of the person or persons, or corporation, committee, association or other unincorporated group, or other entity” paying for the ad.⁶

The FCC has been particularly concerned with identification of political ad sponsors⁷ and has a long history of directing stations to pierce the veil of a nominal sponsor. As early as the 1940s, the FCC received numerous complaints that “some [radio] stations [were] broadcasting spot announcements [o]n behalf of various political candidates without disclosing the persons or organizations behind them.”⁸ The FCC responded by emphasizing that Section 317 applies to such political advertisements and that the statute requires a “full and fair disclosure of the identity of the person furnishing consideration for the broadcast.”⁹ In 1958, the FCC told a broadcaster that “[o]f particular significance is the requirement of accurate and complete identification of the person or group paying for or furnishing [the] material in connection with the discussion of political matters.”¹⁰ Further, it said the duty to investigate the true source of the funding requires the “highest degree of diligence” for political matter.¹¹ To comply with the FCC’s rules, broadcasters have an affirmative obligation to investigate the source of funds in order to disclose accurate and complete identification of the sponsor.

The purpose of requiring public disclosure of the identity of political message sponsors is that “listeners are entitled to know by whom they are being persuaded.”¹² Listeners should also be “clearly informed that [they are] hearing and viewing matter which has been paid for” and should be informed of the identity of the sponsor.¹³ Efforts to obscure the true funding of political messages have recently proliferated as individuals increasingly turn to political action committees with opaque or misleading names to hide funders’ identities.¹⁴

Disclosure also promotes transparency and accountability in political advertising.¹⁵ Indeed, the Supreme Court has repeatedly embraced disclosure as “justified based on a governmental interest in provid[ing] the electorate with information about the sources of election-related spending.”¹⁶ Moreover, the Court has said that in light of “modern technology,” disclosure is “a particularly effective means of arming the voting public with information.”¹⁷

II. Independence USA PAC and its Wisconsin Attorney General ads.

Independence is a Super PAC created in 2012 by Michael Bloomberg, the then-mayor of New York City.¹⁸ Its stated mission is to “support candidates and referenda in local, state and Federal races across the country, with a focus on issues including gun laws, the environment, education policy and marriage equality.”¹⁹ Acting under the name Independence USA, Mr. Bloomberg has been active in, among other things, criticizing state attorneys general who recently joined a federal law suit to block the White House’s Clean Power Plan.

In November of this year, Independence purchased time to run a political advertisement on WTMJ-TV that criticized Wisconsin Attorney General Brad Schimel. The ad accuses Schimel of “siding with polluters” by supporting the law suit, and putting polluters ahead of Wisconsin families.²⁰ The ad’s on-air disclosure says: “PAID FOR BY INDEPENDENCE USA PAC.” The disclosure did not reference Michael Bloomberg and gave no indication that any individual or entity other than Independence was responsible for the ad.

III. WTMJ-TV has not “fully and fairly disclosed the true identity” of the sponsor of the Independence ad.

A. Michael Bloomberg is the “true identity” of the sponsor of the ad.

The plain language of the Communications Act and the FCC’s rules, along with the purpose of the disclosure laws, requires broadcasters to go beyond simply accepting the unsupported assurances of an advertiser as to the source of their funds when the claimed sponsor is naming the Super PAC that paid for the ad.²¹ WTMJ-TV has failed to “fully and fairly disclose the true identity” of the sponsor of these ads because it disclosed only the name of the

Mr. Bloomberg announced the formation of Independence on October 17, 2012. When the ad aired in November on WTMJ-TV, Mr. Bloomberg had to-date contributed over $27 million of his own wealth to the group. According to the most recent FEC disclosure reports, Mr. Bloomberg’s contributions account for 100 per cent of Independence’s total receipts (See Figure 1).

The Independence website describes the group’s political efforts as “a continuation of Michael R. Bloomberg’s long history of supporting candidates and referenda that reflect his independent and non-partisan approach to government” (See Figure 2).

Independence USA PAC

Michael R. Bloomberg has created a major effort to support candidates and referenda in local, state and Federal races across the country, with a focus on issues including gun laws, the environment, education policy and marriage equality. The effort will support moderates on both sides of the aisle – as well as independents –who have shown a willingness to work in a bi-partisan fashion. It will also target candidates who support– and oppose– efforts to crack down on illegal guns and reform education policy.

"It's critically important that we have elected officials in Washington, Albany, and around the nation who are willing to work across party lines to achieve real results," Michael R. Bloomberg said. "I've always believed in the need for more independent leadership, and this new effort will support candidates and causes that will help protect Americans from the scourge of gun violence, improve our schools, and advance our freedoms."

This effort is a continuation of Michael R. Bloomberg's long history of supporting candidates and referenda that reflect his independent and non-partisan approach to government.

Thus, Independence owes its existence to Michael Bloomberg's contributions. Independence would not be running any ads without Mr. Bloomberg's money. Independence, in effect, acts as Mr. Bloomberg's political advertising arm and states as much on its webpage. Therefore, the true identity of the sponsor of Independence ads is Michael Bloomberg.

Further, the name "Independence USA PAC" does not fully and fairly inform the public about who paid for the ad. Disclosing only "Independence USA PAC" leaves the public unaware that the group is furthering Michael Bloomberg's political agenda and that he controls the message. It is misleading to claim Independence is the only relevant name that must be disclosed on-air.²²

B. Before being contacted by Complainants, WTMJ-TV failed to use reasonable diligence to determine and disclose sponsorship information.

Information was readily available for WTMJ-TV to determine and disclose that Mr. Bloomberg is the true sponsor of Independence ads. As outlined below, WTMJ-TV failed to fulfill its affirmative obligation to use reasonable diligence to obtain this information on its own. Moreover, it failed to do the same even after Complainants provided the station with credible, unrefuted evidence that Independence acts at the direction of Michael Bloomberg in a letter emailed to WTMJ-TV General Manager Joe Poss on November 19, 2015. In addition to providing the station with information showing that Mr. Bloomberg is the sole source of funding of Independence and that he controls the group's efforts, the letter reminded WTMJ-TV of its on-air sponsor identification requirement obligations and requested that the station identify Mr. Bloomberg during future ad runs. So far as Complainants can determine, WTMJ-TV continued to run the improperly identified ad through November 22, 2015, and has not indicated that it will properly identify Mr. Bloomberg on any future Independence ads.

WTMJ-TV employees should have consulted with “other persons with whom it deals directly in connection with” the ad by asking the time buyers, ad agencies, and other representatives of Independence for information necessary to make the correct disclosure. There is no indication that WTMJ-TV made any such inquiries. Further, WTMJ-TV should have been able to determine that Mr. Bloomberg is the sole funder of Independence by exercising even minimal diligence. Station employees should have looked at the Independence website, which makes no effort to hide that the group serves to advance Mr. Bloomberg’s political agenda. WTMJ-TV employees should have also looked at Independence’s FEC filings, which are freely available online, to see that Michael Bloomberg is the sole funder. Moreover, a simple Google search for information regarding Independence would have produced numerous articles stating that Independence is funded and controlled by Mr. Bloomberg. For instance, recent headlines in the New York Times have read “Bloomberg Targets Attorneys General With Ads on Carbon Emissions”²³ and “Bloomberg Tries to Help Centrists With TV Ads.”²⁴ One of the articles reports that “Mr. Bloomberg will pay for television ads through his Independence USA PAC,”²⁵ and others have described the ads as being purchased by “Independence USA--Michael Bloomberg’s PAC.”²⁶ A USA Today story titled “Michael Bloomberg Puts Money in Key Races

In this case, it appears that WTMJ-TV undertook no investigation whatsoever and furthermore ignored this sponsorship information when it was directly provided to the station.

In sum, WTMJ-TV has failed to exercise reasonable diligence to determine and disclose the true identity of the sponsor of the ad in violation of Section 317 of the Communications Act and Section 73.1212 of the FCC’s rules. WTMJ-TV further failed to properly identify Bloomberg even after Complainants’ November 19, 2015 letter put the station on notice that Bloomberg is the true sponsor. The evidence provided in this case was clear, credible, and unrefuted, and WTMJ-TV’s failure to change its identification constitutes a violation of Section 317 of the Communications Act and Section 73.1212 of the FCC’s rules.

IV. WTMJ-TV failed to respond to Complainants’ letter.

WTMJ-TV did not respond to Complainants’ letter presenting evidence that Mr. Bloomberg is the true sponsor of Independence ads. As such, it has failed to demonstrate that it made any effort, much less exercised reasonable diligence, to determine the true sponsor of the ads airing on its station, in violation of the Communications Act and the Commission's rules.

Conclusion

WTMJ-TV's determination not to identify Michael Bloomberg as the true sponsor of the Independence ads was clearly unreasonable and violated Section 317 of the Communications Act and Section 73.1212 of the Commission's rules.

The Communications Act and FCC rules are intended to inform the public about the true source of funding when broadcast stations air paid political programming. WTMJ-TV failed to fulfill its affirmative obligation to determine and disclose the true sponsor of the Independence ad. Even after Complainants provided this information to WTMJ-TV directly, the station failed to commit to making the necessary disclosure. Thus, the Campaign Legal Center, Common Cause, and the Sunlight Foundation respectfully request that the FCC declare that WTMJ-TV was not in compliance with the Communications Act and the FCC's rules and require WTMJ-TV to comply in the future. They further request that the FCC take other measures, such as assessing forfeitures and issuing a Public Notice reminding broadcast stations of their obligations, to ensure that this and other broadcast stations fully and fairly identify on-air the source of funding for political advertisements, and make all the legally required disclosures in the future.

Re: WTMJ-TV's failure to identify Michael Bloomberg as the sponsor of advertisements currently being carried on WTMJ-TV

Dear Mr. Poss:

We are writing on behalf of the Sunlight Foundation ("Sunlight"), Campaign Legal Center ("CLC"), and Common Cause ("CC").

Your station has been running broadcast advertisements criticizing Wisconsin Attorney General Brad Schimel for filing suit against an EPA Clean Air Act decision. The ads are identified on air as having been paid for by "Independence USA PAC" ("Independence") (Attachment A). Even a cursory investigation of Independence would have disclosed that Independence is the alter ego of Michael Bloomberg, that Michael Bloomberg has provided all the funding for Independence, that he is the true sponsor of the ads, and that he should be identified on the air as the sponsor. Accordingly, Sunlight, CLC and CC therefore call upon WTMJ-TV to identify Michael Bloomberg as the sponsor on all future broadcasts of Independence USA ads, effective immediately.

 Admitted to bars of Washington State, the United States Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, and the United States District Court of the District of Columbia.

The Communications Act and the FCC's regulations require broadcast stations to "fully and fairly disclose the true identity" of the sponsor of advertisements at the time the ad is aired.¹

Independence is not hiding the fact that Michael Bloomberg is the creator and funder of Independence. In fact, in announcing the campaign of which WTMJ-TV's ads are a part, Independence issued a press release which explicitly states that "Independence USA PAC was created and is funded by Michael R. Bloomberg."² The release explains that the ad campaign is "[b]uilding on Michael R. Bloomberg's longstanding commitment to environmental and health issues." It also notes that the ads "build on Bloomberg Philanthropies' commitment of over $100 million to support national, regional, and state-based groups helping state governments implement the [White House's] Clean Power Plan," and that "Bloomberg Philanthropies has directly supported the goals of the Clean Power Plan through its Clean Energy Initiative, a program that builds on the former Mayor's record of environmental activism."

The fact that these are Bloomberg's ads has also been reported prominently in the national media. Headlines in the New York Times have read "Bloomberg Targets Attorneys General With Ads on Carbon Emissions"³ and "Bloomberg Tries to Help Centrists With TV Ads."⁴ One of the articles reports that "Mr. Bloomberg will pay for television ads through his Independence USA PAC,"⁵ and others have described the ads as being purchased by "Independence USA--Michael Bloomberg's PAC."⁶

These reports should have triggered further review by WTMJ-TV. Section 317 of the Communications Act requires a broadcast licensee to exercise "reasonable diligence" to "obtain from its employees, and from other persons with whom it deals directly in connection with [the advertisement], information to enable" the broadcaster to accurately identify the advertisement's sponsor.⁷ Had WTMJ-TV simply looked at Independence's website, it would have seen that the site calls Bloomberg the group's creator and calls the PAC a "continuation of Mayor

Bloomberg's long history of supporting candidates and referenda that reflect his independent and non-partisan approach to government" (Attachment B). Moreover, Federal Election Commission disclosure reports clearly confirm that 100% of Independence's contributions have come from Michael Bloomberg (Attachment C).

Based on the incontrovertible evidence that Michael Bloomberg is the true sponsor of the Independence ads, WTMJ-TV should have identified him as the sponsor of these commercials from the very start. In any event, now that you have the information provided herein, WTMJ-TV must immediately begin to comply with the Communications Act and the FCC's regulations by identifying Michael Bloomberg's sponsorship.

If you do not comply with this request by November 25, 2015, Sunlight, CLC and CC will file a complaint against WTMJ-TV with the Federal Communications Commission.

Independence USA PAC

Michael R. Bloomberg has created a major effort to support candidates and referenda in local, state and Federal races across the country, with a focus on issues including gun laws, the environment, education policy and marriage equality. The effort will support moderates on both sides of the aisle – as well as independents –who have shown a willingness to work in a bi-partisan fashion. It will also target candidates who support– and oppose– efforts to crack down on illegal guns and reform education policy.

"It's critically important that we have elected officials in Washington, Albany, and around the nation who are willing to work across party lines to achieve real results," Michael R. Bloomberg said. "I've always believed in the need for more independent leadership, and this new effort will support candidates and causes that will help protect Americans from the scourge of gun violence, improve our schools, and advance our freedoms."

This effort is a continuation of Michael R. Bloomberg's long history of supporting candidates and referenda that reflect his independent and non-partisan approach to government.
